

importance of computers

Computers today occupy one of the most important positions in the development of mankind, but in the first place, of course, telephones and smartphones because we use them an order of magnitude more often than a computer. Despite this, it is better and more convenient to work on a computer, create documents, and work with files and folders. the computer has a thorough file system with different file managers, therefore it is easier to work with it than with the usual one that is present on the phone because they are tailored for different tasks. And as I wrote earlier in another essay, I use a laptop because I don't see the need for myself to buy any powerful personal computer because I don't play high-performance games or mine bitcoins or render different videos. Although it is possible in the future, I can afford it.
